Children: Joshua – 31 High school guidance counselor in suburban Boston

Rachel – 29 High school math teacher in Arlington, VA. Just got married this past May.

What have you been up to for the last 40 years?

Actually, I am still in high school. Looking back, I realized I was inspired by Whitey Wilson and became a math teacher. I got a Masters degree in Counseling to be a better teacher, but found that field even more rewarding. For the past 28 years, I have been a guidance counselor at Glenbrook South High School in Glenview, IL. I still like working with high school kids and helping them with all of their adolescent challenges. At the same time, I think they have helped me stay young in spirit.

Who are you now? What is important to you now?

At my first teaching job at Luther North High School, I was asked to coach track and cross country. I ran track at FHS my junior year only to prepare for football. Because I knew little about the sport, I ran the workouts with the kids, and realized I actually like running. Since my own children have left home, I've been competing in more races. I hope to finish my 14th marathon in Chicago, the week after our reunion.

I also enjoy working on projects for our house, yard, and garden. We live on a small lake in Palatine. I love all the activities that our lake has to offer, including the serenity of living on the water.
